A Little Latin...A Little History...a little review

Last year we learned of the Etruscans. They were skilled bronze metal workers and well organized living north of Rome circa 800 BC. The Latins lived in Latium. The strongest of the Italic tribes were known for superior iron weapons. The Greeks also hung around. These cultures all had strong influences on the future of Rome.

The Roman Monarchy with its seven kings reigned from 753BC to 509BC. Romulus killed his brother, Remus, to become the first king. He ruled over bandits and exiled men. Some kings ruled well, others were notorious and scandalous. Tarquinius Superbus was the 7th king. He was overthrown opening the way for the Roman Republic. Stay tuned for the adventures and miss steps of the Roman Republic.
